

Emmalyn Chen

Born: California

Currently: University of California, San Francisco, San Francisco, California

Hearing Jim Allison's story was so refreshing. At the time, I was at a really low point. I had been working on the same thing for a while and was getting frustrated and questioning whether my work was even meaningful. Being reminded that other scientists go through their own struggles and relating to their story is very motivating. It gives me conviction and confidence about what I'm doing.